GOLD HILL, NEVADA:
Monday Evening, April 17, 1865.

LASHED.

In a postscript in the News on Saturday evening we stated that a Vigilance Committee were in session in Gold Hill, and inquiring into the case of a man who had given expression to joy at the assassination of the President. The prisoner had been a resident of this vicinity for a number of years, and went by the name of "Posey Coxsey" (Coxsey is his real name). He is a Tennesseean, but came to this coast from Illinois. We have heard it stated by a gentleman who is very apt to know, that he is one of the five who once raised a secession flag in Virginia city. The Vigilance Committee on Saturday took his case in hand, and upon due inquiry, found him guilty of using such expressions (after the news had been received of the assassination of the President) as "that he was d-n glad of it; that it was a pity he had not been killed years ago." The jury made a report to the citizens to that effect, and another committee was appointed to inflict such punishment as he merited. That committee ordered him to receive thirty lashes on the bare back, and then to be handed over to the Provost Marshal. The prisoner had been locked up, in the station-house, and when the committee went to inflict the punishment, Marshal Johnson refused to unlock the doors. But the committee soon found a way to unlock the door without a key—the job being done with an axe and a sledge-hammer. Coxsey was accordingly brought forth in the presence of a crowd of about five hundred persons, stripped of his shirt, and eight or ten lashes administered, severely laid on. A motion was then made and carried that the sentence should be suspended, and that the prisoner should carry the American flag up to Virginia, and have a placard on his back bearing this inscription: "A traitor to his country." All of which was duly performed, and as the crowd reached the Divide, between this town and Virginia, they met the Provost Guard, who then took Coxsey in charge. We suppose he will be sent to Fort Churchill to pack sand. So much for "shooting his mouth off." That he was not hung before sundown is the only thing that surprises us. Our people are not in a humor to show much mercy to insidious traitors in our midst, nor to those who give expression of joy for the murder of the President of the United States.

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES.

By reference to another column of the News, it will be observed that the Executive Committee of our Home Guards have made arrangements for the due observance of the Funeral Obsequies of our late and much lamented President. It is proper that this last sad tribute of respect to the memory of the head of the nation should be bestowed by our people. According to the dispatches which left Washington on Saturday afternoon, the Funeral of President LINCOLN will take place on Thursday next.

A SHE-SERPENT.—When parties were engaged, on Monday last, in firing off anvils in front of Gillig, Mott & Co.'s store and Treat & Strauss' market, in Virginia, a lady of that city, the wife of a well-known Democrat, exclaimed: "I wish every discharge would kill one of the men who are firing!" Will we never understand the spirit—we may say the "sentiment"—of this rebellion? Nothing so horrible has transpired since Satan fought and fell. It seems as if the very gates of Hell had rolled back on their infernal hinges and let out the most damned fiends that howled in the lower depths, and they, with a malignity cultivated for thousands of years in pitch-black devil-dom, had passed into the bodies of men and women of the chivalrous line, there to dwell and to inspire. We pray that God in his infinite mercy will redeem from a like in-dwelling the children who must call such women mothers.

A FIT EXCLAMATION.—"So sempiterna tyrannus!" So shouted the assassin as he brandished his dagger in the face of the "bewildered audience." It is the motto of the seal of old Virginia. A noble motto, and a glorious shield is engraven on that ancient shield. But now, what signifies this quotation at that time? It told of the educated villainy of the wretch who shrieked it with appropriate gesticulation. The "chivalry" of the old Dominion was there and then fully illustrated. To have brought the understanding of all his connections and affiliations down to the present day, the murderer should have added: "Hurrah for the Democratic party!"

THE BEGINNING AND THE ENDING.—This rebellion commenced with a cowardly firing of 100 guns on 70 half famished soldiers in Fort Sumter; it concludes with an assassination! What enacted drama of the stage has dared to equal this? Before this time such a tragedy would have been condemned utterly as violating every probability of human action. And it has been butchery, butchery, all the way through, on the part of the chivalrous Confederates.

AN UNDENIABLE FACT.—The Chivalry have been beaten on every open field, during this rebellion. This is asserted, without regard to disparity of numbers on most occasions, to the advantage of the assassins. This is a fact, not to be denied by those who have read the substantially concuring reports of the commanders on either side.

ALFRED TUTTLE.—Is there any person in this State who can inform us whether such a man has resided at any time in Nevada? Address, Editor GO HILLI News.

SERMON FOR THE TIME.

Rev. Mr. Dunn, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, preached in Virginia, last evening, a discourse appropriate to the day of bereavement. The church was crowded to suffocation, though there had been no special or extended notice of the proposed topic or character of the evening's remarks. Many went away unable to secure seats. The particular sermon-subject, adopted by the preacher, is shown by his texts—one from St. John: Christ's remark to Pilate, that he (Pilate) could do nothing, except power for him to do was given from above. The other from the Psalms: The declaration that God made the wrathful man to praise Him, and the remainder of wrath He restrained. The discourse was a very able one; holding the vast audience in complete and wrapt attention. It was marked throughout by good taste, as well as sound patriotism and piety. A part of the National religion of the preacher, as developed by his speech, was decidedly radical, and on its expression a general disposition to applaud was hardly restrained to murmurs of assent and approbation. (We learn that Mr. Dunn did not ask leave of his "Vestry" to preach this sermon!) We regret that we have not space for a full synopsis of this discourse. We will mention two concluding suggestions of the preacher: He thought that even now he saw from this special and awful exhibition of the "wrath of man," a praising light breaking on the Nation. He could not insist that he was correct in his vision; but he was pretty well convinced that the "light" was in the quarter indicated by him. A week ago, and the news of a Victory that seemed synonymous with Peace had made us all disposed to forgive and forget. For his own part, on Monday evening last, in a church-meeting, for the purpose of congratulation and thanksgiving, he had uttered the heart-felt hope that the mind of clemency and forgiving kindness would characterize all our future associations with those who had "unfortunately" been led to sympathize with this rebellion. And the terms of General Grant to Lee were approved for their liberality. Everybody was, in fact, ready to shake hands over a buried past, and look to a common future for a reunited country. The spirit of conciliation was abroad, and was prevailing. We hardly could discriminate our political enemies of old. He would not then have harrowed the feelings of a Copperhead by allusions to his past course on the subject of rebellion—no, not for the world. He calculated that a Copperhead conscience, then-days, was a wounded animal, hard enough to bear. Such was the temper of the loyal masses, one short week ago. How, perchance, did God regard this? Was this great National calamity, the providence of God disclosing that Secession is a serpent; warning us that we must not take a venomous snake to our bosom (if at all), without first extracting its fangs; or even telling us that some creatures are venomous throughout, incurably poisonous, whose deadly deeds and influence was only to be guarded against, for us, our fellow patriots and our children, by utter extermination? Is the brain, the body of this rebellion, so saturated with fiendish malignity that life must be entirely drained therefrom, or we all perish? Did God see that Abraham Lincoln was too generous, too benevolent a man for the time; and so, after many and great perspicacity, permit his assassination? Did God see that Andy Johnson was a sterner man, one who better knew the real character of this rebellion and its authors, and who would deal with it and them more in accordance with the principles of justice, less under the movings of misguided clemency? Had we all been mistaken in thinking that the era of good National fellowship had come; when that was a point not to be reached until the root and branch of this rebellion were extirpated and burned up as stubble in a furnace; to be known on the face of the land no more forever? Was this so? It was only a hint, a speculation of the preacher's. He offered it as nothing else. He might be wrong; he believed he was right. Certainly lesson was: "There must be, there can be no more neutrality. Men and women must be distinctly known as for or against the Government. The traitors and the professed lukewarm, alike, must be speared out of the Nation's mouth." [Applause.] And now, said the preacher, in conclusion, when the news of another victory comes, let us rejoice, indeed, but not after an ungodly sort.

THE SAD NEWS IN SACRAMENTO.

SACRAMENTO, April 15—1 P. M.
The news of the assassination of President Lincoln and Secretary Seward has created a most profound sensation among our loyal people. A calamity so great, so unexpected, seemed scarcely possible, and for a short time the people were either incredulous or dumb-founded, scarcely able to realize the greatness of the misfortune which has come upon us as a Nation. The city is still—like as on a Sunday. Business is almost entirely suspended. Men meet in little groups along the streets, and in undertones speak of the blow that makes the mind stagger—scarcely able to realize it. From all the flagstaffs through the city flags droop at half mast, while from the various engine houses the fire bells toll mournfully for the great dead. With the exception of a few malignant secessionists, who are reported to be exultant, great grief overwhelms all. Should the rebellious portion of our population give signs of joy at this great loss to the people, it will raise a whirlwind of bitter passion which will wreak its vengeance on them.

IN MEMORIAM.—We believe the general custom to be, to put on mourning weeds on and after the day of the funeral of the great lamented dead. We therefore hope that every true citizen will from and after Thursday next, for thirty days, wear a visible token of his grief for the mighty loss we mourn.

SLAVE PINS ABOLISHED IN LOUISIANA.—The slave pins in Louisiana (Ky.), like those of Baltimore, Washington and New Orleans, have been broken up. On the 4th of March, General Palmer ordered the release of all the slaves confined in Louisiana.

GOLD.—Private dispatches from New York, April 14th, quote gold at 146, with a downward tendency.

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The good and much beloved President of our Nation—whose sudden and awful death has cast such a sorrow over the hearts of all loyal people—and for whose loss millions of people are yet weeping—for the clouds of the valley have not yet entombed his mortal body—is succeeded in his high official position by the late Vice President of the United States—ANDREW JOHNSON. We presume he entered upon the duties of his office on Saturday last. He was in Washington at the time the President died, and no doubt he soon after took the oath of President. As our mourning people dry the tears from their eyes, it is natural that the thoughts arise in their minds as to the condition of the country, now that its great head has fallen, and naturally inquire as to who it is that can fill his place. ANDREW JOHNSON was well enough known to be nominated and elected Vice President—the duties of which usually are simply that of presiding officer of the U. S. Senate. We believe it is the prayer of all good people that ANDREW JOHNSON may prove a worthy, a faithful, and capable successor of the late President—that peace to a united and prosperous Nation may be restored—that our country may soon again prosper from its northern to its extreme southern borders—and the asperities and antipathies engendered by the war be passed away forever—and a feeling of kindness and brotherly feeling re-established among all who claim to be American citizens.

The New York Sun, of a late date, contained the following brief sketch of ANDREW JOHNSON, who is now our President. [In the concluding sentences of the extract, reference is made to an "impropriety" which Mr. Johnson committed on the day of the Inauguration of President. In explanation, we will just state that he got "tight," and made a very foolish speech, where he should not have made it.]

Though far from agreeing with many of the political views of Andrew Johnson, we recognize that there is not in the United States a man who has rendered more effective service to the Union cause. He has been in the depths and whirlpool of secession, and held his ground, from first to last, like a man. At a time when the South had seceded from the Union, and when the treachery of Buchanan, and the scarcely disguised vacillation of President Lincoln and some of his advisers, and the course of a large portion of the public press, headed by the New York Tribune, all combined to render it extremely doubtful whether any active opposition would be offered to the formation of a Southern slave Confederacy, Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, in his place in the United States Senate, denounced Jeff. Davis and the other Southern traitors to their faces, and maintained that the American people would never submit to disunion and dismemberment of the chivalry, and abandoned house, home, property and everything for the Union, and he has ever been true to his record. As Governor of Tennessee, he inspired all his Generals there with the saving grace of his indomitable spirit and strong will. It is no secret that at one time Nashville would have been evacuated, but for his opposition to the opinion of a well-known General, who maintained that it should be abandoned. In a strictly strategic point of view it might have been, for it had been flanked by Bragg's army. But thank triumph, and Nashville is ours to this day; and was the base for all Sherman's glorious successes. We who live peacefully at home, cannot realize the fierce excitement and peril to which his services, and his own personal valor, and his determination to stand up for his principles. Still less can we comprehend the tremendous strain upon a leader of even Andrew Johnson's stalwart frame and robust mind. The over-excitement was too much for him, at last. The strong man succumbed in his hour of triumph. At the moment when his services had been recognized by the American people, the Vice President elect was stricken down with an illness from which he never recovered. He did not pass the ordeal unscathed. The excitement that produced his sickness followed him during his convalescence, and he resorted to strong drink to drown the clamor of office-holders, that haunted President Taylor to his death. It still remains to be decided whether Vice President Johnson's services, and the period of his usefulness, or whether his removal from his high position may not be necessary to the honor and dignity of our country. But in the future, the memory of his services will eclipse his faults, and we who reap the benefits of his labors should not prejudice ourselves before posterity, by judging too harshly a man to whom we owe so much.

"HUNG IN BLACK!"
Though the present generation of men should live to the sombre age of gray senility, yet will they never witness the parallel of the sorrow that spreads its dark pall, to-day, over the American nation. The strong men bow themselves, and the old men tremble, and the sound of lamentation comes up from the million hearthstones of bereaved America. What shall we say? Is it possible to express, in feeble words, the universal agony? Let us, rather, in silence and self-communication meditate upon the catastrophe which has shed its blight, not only upon us as a nation but upon the world.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, GOLD HILL.—Yesterday being Easter Sunday, preparations for its observance had been made, but the afflicting news changed the regular course. The Rev. Mr. Whitaker, offering prayers for the President's family, and the Nation at large. Preceding the sermon, he addressed the congregation at length, in a dressed, feeling manner, that brought tears to many eyes, and deepened the sadness each one then experienced. The remarks were chaste and eloquent, and were the theme of comment yesterday by all who had the privilege of hearing them. The Chancel and gallery were draped in mourning, so remain for thirty days.

SALVAGE PROPERTY.—The sale of houses, barns, sheds, etc., belonging to the Yellow Jacket mine, advertised to be sold last Saturday, has been postponed until tomorrow (Tuesday) at 12 o'clock. The property will positively be sold, as the ground has to be cleared of the buildings as soon as possible.

Never Failing Safety and Success. Mrs. WILSON'S SOOTHING STUPE is a safe and certain remedy for all diseases with which children are afflicted during the process of teething. It has been used for thirty years. Never known to fail. Give it freely, and you will find it the best. Cures wind colic and regulates the bowels. Cures a tooth.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE GOLD HILL DAILY NEWS.)

Assassination of President Lincoln!

The Latest Particulars!

NEWS TO-YESTERDAY!

New York, April 16.—Miss Harris, who was in the box with the President, makes the following statement: Nearly an hour before the commission of the deed the assassin came to the door of the box, looked in, and took a survey of the position of its occupants. It was supposed at the time that it was either a mistake, or an exercise of impertinent curiosity. The circumstance attracted no particular attention at the time. Upon his entering the box again, Major Rathburn rose and asked the intruder his business. The latter rushed past the Major without making any reply, placed his pistol close to the back of the President's head, actually in contact with it, and fired, then instantly sprang upon the cushioned balustrade of the box, when he made a backward plunge with his knife, aimed at the face or breast of Mr. Lincoln. Major Rathburn, springing forward to protect the President, received the stab in his arm.

The murderer then jumped on the stage and effected his escape. The rapidity with which the attack was committed upon the President was astounding. Mrs. Lincoln saw the form of the assassin go down from the box, and thought Mr. Lincoln had fallen out. She looked to see if she could see him on the floor, and barely saw the culprit jump to the stage, when, alas, as she turned her eyes to the box, she saw Mr. Lincoln's head had dropped forward upon his breast, and at once realized what had transpired. From the moment the President was shot, up to his death, he was insensible and exhibited no signs of pain, and recognized no one. In fact, it was believed he did not open his eyes. The blood troubled his breathing, often making it exceedingly difficult.

Summary of Late News.

The Virginia morning papers failed to issue yesterday, but they came out with Extra this morning, from which we make the following summary: The murderer of the President has been identified, and there is scarcely a doubt but it was J. Wilkes Booth, a son of old Booth, the tragedian. The wounded murderer of Secretary Seward, and believed to be John Surant, of Prince George County. They seemed to have acted in conjunction. Neither had been arrested at last accounts. Secretary Seward was alive yesterday, and hopes are entertained of his recovery. His son, Fred Seward, was not expected to live. One of the men-nurses who struggled with the assassin to keep him from Mr. Seward, is dead.

The Herald's Washington special dispatch says the scene at the President's bedside is described by one who witnessed it as most affecting. It was surrounded by Cabinet Ministers, all of whom were bathed in tears, not even excepting Mr. Stanton, who, when informed by Surgeon-General Barnes that the President could not live until morning, exclaimed, "Oh, no! General! no!" and with an impulse as natural as it was unaffected, immediately sat down on a chair, near his bedside, and wept like a child. President Sumner was seated on the right of the President, and Couch at the head, holding the right hand of the President in his own. He was sobbing like a woman, with his head bowed down almost on the pillow of the bed on which the President was lying.

It is evident that the scope of the plot was intended to be much more comprehensive. The Vice President and other prominent members of the Administration were particularly inquired for by the suspected parties, and their precise location accurately ascertained; but in their cases the plan miscarried. The body of the President has been embalmed, with the view of removing it to Springfield, Illinois. It is expected, though nothing is definitely determined upon, that the funeral of the late President will take place on Thursday next.

The Vice President took the oath and entered upon the duties of the office of President on Saturday. He has retained the Cabinet of the late President.

All over the country the people appear to be horrified, and the utmost rage is undoubtedly felt for all known secessionists and rebel sympathizers.

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES.

On the day the remains of the lamented President LINCOLN are interred, the citizens of Gold Hill will also unite in celebration of the obsequies, by procession, prayer and funeral address.

The Executive Committee, last evening, made suitable arrangements to this end, and it is desired that on the day (of which due notice will be given) all places of business will be closed, from 10 o'clock A. M. to 4 o'clock P. M., and every one take part in the last tribute of respect to the illustrious dead.

The procession will form in front of the News office, right reading on Crown Point street; thence up Main, Blanchard and Telegraph streets to Fort Homestead, where, after a salute by the Artillery and Infantry, prayer will be offered by Rev. O. W. Whitaker, and a Funeral Address will be delivered by B. C. Whitman, Esq. Thence, re-forming, the procession will march down Main street to the Imperial Mill, counter-march to the News office and dismisse.

The Chief Marshal has appointed as his Aids, Messrs. Lem. U. Colbeth, D. L. Bliss, W. N. Hall, C. H. Van Gorder, W. E. Hale and J. C. Corey.

HON. N. A. H. BALL, President of the Day.

The order of procession will be as follows:

1. Music.
2. Home Guards.
3. Odd Fellows.
4. Artillery Company.
5. Masons.
6. Hose Company.
7. Turn Verein.
8. Orator and Chaplain.
9. Operatives of Mines and Mills, led by their Superintendents.
10. Sons of Temperance.
11. Citizens generally.
12. Teamsters, mounted.

Each of the above Associations are requested to be prepared, so that they can assemble upon short notice. It is expected the services will take place at Washington on Wednesday, yet they may occur on Monday, (to-morrow.)

Procession will move at 12 o'clock, precisely.

By order of the Executive Committee.

JOHN H. MILLS,

Chief Marshal.

P. S. Citizens of neighboring towns are cordially invited to take part in the exercises of the day.

SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE GOLD HILL DAILY NEWS.)

The Riot last Saturday—Saturday Night Passed Away Quietly.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16—2 P. M.
Troops from the Presidio and Alcatraz, numbering about two thousand men, were marched into the city, and the State militia were all put under arms. Most of the saloons were closed, and the whole of the respectable portion of the population exerted themselves to their utmost to maintain order. Only about half a dozen persons were arrested for participation in rioting, and one or two for plundering and sacking of the News Letter and Monitor offices. It was more thorough than at first supposed. The office of the Franco-American was also cleared out. In the attack upon the Monitor office the crowd broke into the loyal "Vose de Mexico" establishment by mistake, and damaged it so badly that the paper cannot be issued. The whole demonstration lasted from three to half-past five o'clock.

The mob went to the Echo du Pacific office, in the same building as that occupied by the Alta, on Sacramento street, and would have destroyed it, but for the explanations that they would have to pass through the composing rooms of the Alta to get to those of the Echo. The result would have been almost the certain destruction of the former as well as the latter.

Gen. McDowell, McRuer, Tubbs, Sinton and others addressed the mob and urged it to disperse, and the advice was followed.

In the evening the Loyal League had a meeting, which was addressed by many speakers, counseling the maintenance of peace and order, and deprecating the violence which had been committed. The Grant Club held a meeting, and a violent discussion took place, but majority favored order.

No further demonstration was made to-day (Sunday). The streets are mainly quiet. Only a small crowd of excited individuals has assembled at the corner of Montgomery and Clay streets.

The Echo, News-Letter, Press, and Monitor offices were seized by Captain Ullis, on orders of General McDowell, in the name of the United States, at 11 o'clock last night, and troops are stationed in each to-day.

The attack on the offices grew solely out of the assassination of the President, and not from any immediate demonstrations by these papers. The Democratic Press office was in full mourning, and its flag at half-mast, decorated with crape, when attack was made. The evening edition had not yet been issued.

The streets are being constantly patrolled, and the whole number of men under arms is some 5,000, exclusive of the armed police.

There is hardly a private residence or building in the city not in mourning; and services for the occasion are being held in all the churches.

LATER DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17—3 P. M.

A meeting of citizens is in session at present, making arrangements for the Funeral Obsequies to take place on next Thursday.

All the churches yesterday were crowded, for it was expected that the ministers would preach upon the all-absorbing topic. They were not mistaken.

Captain Moss, proprietor of the Democratic Press, had an audience with General McDowell. The result of the interview has not transpired.

Captain Chadwick, of the steamer Chrysolis, died very suddenly last evening, at the residence of Capt. Baby.
